Reusing Household Items

Throwing away a pair of old socks may not seem that important. After all, you've got a house full of stuff. However, what if that pair of socks could save you $36 over the next year? Many people would march right out to the garbage bin and bring those socks right back inside! By using a pair of old but clean cotton socks as dusting rags, you can save more than $36 every year.

Most people normally purchase dust clothes at the store and those can cost upwards of $3 for one pack, which only lasts about one month on average. Suddenly you're looking at a sizable expense in dust clothes.

Keep your money in your wallet and instead follow the principle of recycling by using an old item to meet a current need. Slide an old sock over one hand and you've got the perfect dusting mitt...for free! No more costly "dirt-clinging" wipes that run out too fast. Your mitt can be reused over and over again.

The principle of reusing household items like this is not a new one. In fact, people have been doing it almost since time began. Just because you lack a certain item doesn't mean that your need for it disappears. Instead, you have to adapt to meet that need and that can require some creative thinking. Replace your typical attitude with a creative mindset and you may be surprised at the ideas you come up with.

Rather than tossing your old newspapers into the trash can, save them in bags to use in winter as a fire starter or shred it up to line pet boxes.

Have you purchased a new broom to replace your worn-out indoor sweeper? Put the old broom on outdoor duty sweeping walks and driveways while the new one takes over inside.

Instead of throwing away worn dishtowels, put them outside to use as car washing clothes.

There are a variety of ways that you can recycle common household items and you don't have to be a genius to come up with something. The greatest reward of reusing, though, is knowing that you are contributing to a healthier planet for everyone.

Keeping Your Dishes, Pots and Pans Odor-Free

No matter how diligent you may be in washing and maintaining your dishes, pots and pans, you nevertheless may end up with kitchen utensils and dinnerware that end up carrying with them a strong odor. Over time, even high quality and well maintained dinnerware and utensils can end up carrying with them offensive, strong odors.

Many a time when a person is confronted with smell tableware and cooking utensils, they simply despair and began looking for replacement items. However, all is not lost and there are some steps that you can take to keep your cookware and tableware smelling fresh and odor free.

One very useful step that you can take to fight odors that can become associated with kitchenware from time to time is to add lemon juice to your dishwasher. If your dishes and cooking pans have retained strong odors that dishwashing soap might not be able to take out, add a quarter cup of lemon juice to each basin of your dishwasher. In nearly every case of foul smelling odors, lemon juice does the trick. Even after one washing with lemon juice in the mix, you will find that the once offensive odors have started to recede.

In addition to adding lemon juice to your wash water, consider stuffing your pots with dry newspaper after you have washed them and before you store them away. Newspaper can, in many instances, aid in preventing the occurrence of odors in cookware of all types.

Ultimately, by following these simple, practical tips, you will be able to have fresh smelling kitchenware, cookware and tableware and you will be able to extend the life of all of these necessary culinary equipment.

Secret Weapons from the Kitchen

Believe it or not, some of the best and most practical tips for every day life come straight from the kitchen! Dozens of common problems can be solved by using a variety of everyday items found in the kitchen and it is simply amazing at the solutions that are hiding right in your own home!

The kitchen has traditionally been known as the heart of the home and it remains so today. Most people in a family consider the kitchen to be the home base for most activities and the odds are that at least some family members and friends can be found there at almost any time of day.

The kitchen is not just a friendly gathering place but a veritable treasure trove of useful tricks that can solve even the most annoying dilemmas within minutes. If you haven't discovered the secret weapons in your kitchen, read on to learn more!

When you've been cooking with smelly ingredients like garlic or fish, rub your hands on a stainless steel utensil under running water. The smell will almost magically evaporate!

For pans with burnt-on food, fill about halfway with warm water and add three tablespoons of salt or baking soda. Let it sit overnight and in the morning, bring it to a boil, then let it cool. The burned food should wipe away effortlessly.

If you have been working with paints or inks and have stains on your hands, cut a potato in half and rub the cut end on your hands to remove the stains in minutes. Another magic potato trick is to place a raw, peeled potato into an over-salted dish and allow it to cook for five minutes. The potato will absorb the excess salt.

To sharpen the blades of your coffee grinder, toss in a handful of rice every few months and grind it up. This cleans and sharpens at the same time.

With hundreds of uses for everyday staples, the kitchen is certainly the problem solver of every household!

Removing Glue, Decals and Stickers from Furniture: The Vegetable Oil Trick

If you have children around the house, you oftentimes find yourself cleaning up after one accident or another that the young ones cause. For example, children often end up spilling glue on furniture. In addition, either with approval or not, children end up putting decals and stickers on furniture and other items around the house. If this is the case in your home, you may have found yourself scratching your head trying to figure out a way in which you can remove such things as glue, decals and stickers and furniture from the surface of your furniture.

There is a very simple course that you can take to remove glue, decals or stickers from the surface of furniture in your home. To remove glue, decals or stickers from furniture surfaces, pour some vegetable oil on them and rub them off.

The process is precisely as simple as it sounds. You simply apply a moderate amount of vegetable oil to the glue, decal or sticker. With a soft, clean cloth, apply a moderate amount of pressure to the glue, decal or sticker and slowly rub the offensive material off and away.

Using vegetable oil works to ensure that you do not damage the furniture in question in the process of removing glue, decals or stickers. Unfortunately, even some of the best selling commercial products on the market cannot guarantee that using these products to remove glue, decals or stickers will not discolor or damage furniture surfaces in the process.

By using vegetable oil to remove glue, decals or stickers, you will also be able to save money. Many of the commercial products designed to remove these offensive items actually cost a good deal of money. Vegetable oil, on the other hand, is inexpensive and likely already sitting in a bottle in your kitchen cabinet.

Unique and Efficient Housekeeping Tips: The Versatile Cling Free Dryer Sheet

When it comes to housekeeping, there are a number of products that you likely have in your home that can be put to multiple uses. For example, the cling free dryer sheet is one such item.

In a matter of only a few days, your television screen can become covered in a bothersome layer of dust. In many instances, due to the static electricity associated with the television set and screen, a simply untreated towel will not be sufficient to really get the screen clean. However, a cling free dryer sheet will do the job in absolutely no time at all. With one swipe over the screen, you will be able to remove all of that nasty dust with your versatile cling free dryer sheet.

In addition to helping you keep your TV screen free from dust, cling free dryer sheets (the scented versions of the product) are also helpful in keeping the clothes and other items in your closets and drawers smelling fresh and clean. Just drop a sheet into your drawers and you will be impressed with how wonderful they will smell in no time at all. The same holds true for your closets. Place a dryer sheet or two into your closets and you will find that your clothing will remain fresh smelling long after you have washed these items.

Keep in mind the many uses for your dryer sheets. In doing so, the next time you are at the market or store, you will end up purchasing a larger box of cling free dryer sheets.

The Magic of Versatile Vinegar!

One of the most versatile staples found in today's kitchens is the humble vinegar. From laundry duty to pet care and beyond, vinegar performs a variety of functions to clean, treat, neutralize and strengthen in hundreds of ways every day. Though sometimes misunderstood and misused, this simple liquid can be the most powerful all-around tool in your kitchen cabinet as well as save time and money.

It's important to note that there are several different types: apple cider vinegar is a multi-purpose liquid that can be used for everything from cleaning your house to managing your weight. Brown cider vinegar stains porous materials, so it's a good idea to limit usage. White vinegar is a popular choice for daily cleaning. The best choice for the most usage is apple cider vinegar, which can be used for just about anything.

As a deodorizer, vinegar is a fast and cheap option. For smoke smells, douse a piece of bread with vinegar and then place in the room with the odor. The vinegar and bread will absorb the smell and leave the room fresh.

You can also mix 1 tablespoon baking soda, 1 tablespoon vinegar and 2 cups of water into a spray bottle to make your own air freshener. Once it foams up, mix it together thoroughly and you have your own custom made air mister!

Adding vinegar to your laundry can suck odors and smells right out and leave your clothes fresher than ever before. It also cuts back on static cling without requiring messy fabric softener or expensive sheets.

For cleaning, mix one-quarter cup of vinegar in a quart of water and use to wash windows and floors. Your windows will sparkle and your floors will shine!

In terms of personal care, many people recommend adding one tablespoon each of honey and vinegar to a glass of water and drinking it all down to manage weight. Diluted vinegar is also considered to be a wonderful hair rinse as well as a balanced facial toner.

Vinegar is a wonderful multi-purpose resource as long as you know what works for you!
